Iceland's leader resigns, first casualty of Panama Papers

LONDON/REYKJAVIK (Reuters) — Iceland's Prime Minister Sigmundur David Gunnlaugsson resigned on Tuesday, becoming the first casualty of leaked documents from a Panamanian law firm which have shone a spotlight on the offshore wealth of politicians and public figures worldwide.

The Panama Papers showed the premier's wife owned an offshore company with big claims on Iceland's banks, an undeclared conflict of interest for Gunnlaugsson, infuriating many who hurled eggs and bananas in street protests calling for him to step down.

The banks collapsed as the global financial crisis hit in 2008 and many Icelanders blame politicians for not reining in their debt-fueled binge and averting a deep recession.

The more than 11.5 million documents, leaked from the Panamanian law firm Mossack Fonseca, have caused public outrage over how the world's rich and powerful are able to stash their wealth and avoid taxes while many people suffer austerity and hardship.

France blacklists Panama

Mossack Fonseca, which specializes in setting up offshore companies, denies any wrongdoing. On Tuesday, the Panamanian government sought to defend the country's reputation.

Panama President Juan Carlos Varela's chief of staff told a news conference that the government could retaliate after France announced it would put the Central American country back on its blacklist of uncooperative tax jurisdictions. The official, Alvaro Aleman, said that no Panamanian company had been found to have committed a crime.

He added: "We are not going to allow Panama to be used as a scapegoat by third parties. Each country (implicated) is responsible."

Among those named in the documents are friends of Russian President Vladimir Putin, relatives of the leaders of China, Britain and Pakistan, and the president of Ukraine.

Obama: Close loopholes

U.S. President Barack Obama said the Panama Papers showed tax avoidance was a major problem and urged the U.S. Congress to take action to stop U.S. companies from taking advantage of loopholes allowing them to avoid paying taxes.

"We've had another reminder in this big dump of data coming out of Panama that tax avoidance is a big, global problem," he told reporters.

"It's not unique to other countries because frankly there are folks here in America that are taking advantage of this same stuff. A lot of it's legal, but that's exactly the problem."

Rebels shoot down second Syrian jet in a month

(Reuters) — Rebels shot down a second Syrian warplane in less than a month on Tuesday and a monitoring group said they captured its pilot in an area near Aleppo where heavy fighting has erupted in recent days despite a cessation of hostilities agreement.

The Syrian army said the jet was shot down with an anti-aircraft missile, which has been long demanded by foreign-backed rebels against devastating aerial raids by Syrian and, since September, Russian forces.

Rebels said the plane was downed with anti-aircraft guns. Their backers, which include Western and Sunni Muslim regional states, have been wary of delivering weapons such as anti-aircraft missiles that could fall into the hands of headline groups.

Any confirmation the rebels now have the missile equipment would be a major escalation in their weaponry. Syria says an anti-aircraft missile was also used by rebels to shoot down a warplane in western Syria in March.

The aircraft crashed on Tuesday in the Talat al-Iss highland south of Aleppo city, an area where al-Qaeda-affiliated insurgents have come under heavy bombardment by Syrian and Russian warplanes since capturing it in recent days, the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said. The pilot was seized alive by fighters from al-Qaeda's Nusra Front, the monitoring group said.
